Dave Scandurra of Edible Landscapes ("Have your yard, and eat it, too!") will speak on developing the

-Cape Cod Food Forest Project-to map and plant native, food-bearing tree & nut species that support both human and animal communities and restore local biodiversity. Food forests are productive, versatile, and property enhancing, while creating wildlife habitat and a ready supply of nutritious food for the Cape community. Food forests can serve as a model of self sustainable, environmentally friendly, edible landscapes as well as provide educational opportunities for children and adults to explore environmental issues, discover native wild foods and reconnect with nature.
